No single disease has entailed more suffer-ing or hastened the breaking up of the consti-tution than catarrit. The sense of smeil, of taste, of sight, of hearing, the human voice, the mind—one or more, and sometimes all, yield to its destructive influence. The poison it distributes throughout the system attact every vital force, and breaks up the most r bust constitutions. Ignored, because but it the understood, by most physiciane, impoten ly assailed by quicks and chariatans, the suffering from it have little hope to be relieve of it this side of the grave. It is time the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

THE DISCOVERY MADE BY AN OLD MONK 200 YEARS AGO.

Soone at the Grape Gathering-The Wine Presses at Work-From Juice to the Bottle-Ready for Bottling-Corking.

It was an old monk named Dom Petrus Perignombo who, over 200 years ago, first discovered the secret of champagne. Old Petrus was attached to the Benedictine abbey of Hautvilliers, but he seems to have been infinitely more attached to the wine cellar than to his religious duties. Instead of proselyting, the jovial recluse was happy with his nectar and became a perfoct connoisseur in wine. He always saw that the wine cellar was full. One day when experimenting with the precious drink he discovered that it could easily be made effer escent. The process through which champagne passes has something to do with its peculiarities, but it is the na-ture of the soil on which the vines are grown that is the important point. That soil is a mixture of chalk, silica, light clay and oxide of iron; and the champagne manufaturers of France pretend that soil cannot be found in the necessary proportions anywhere else in the world than on the banks of the Marne. Without any and put down all other champagne as

The old story of the poor soul who was caught between "The devil and the deep sea," gets a new illustration from the dealing of doctors and drugs with malaria. The story is soon told: "My daughter," said a lady, "had been struggling with malaria for four years. She was all the time out of health—poor appetite, disordered digestion, pale earthy color, pain in the head, limbs and back, and every now and then a right hard chill, followed by fever. Then we would send for our doctor and he would prescribe quinine, just as he did from the first—and so kept doing all along—until the name of quinine sounds like the tolling of the bell. Clearly between the two, her health was being ruined and her very life in peril. She was really between 'The devil and the deep sea.' Sometimes the name is varied, and it is called some other 'ine' in place of quinine, but it is all the same—the old firm with a new sign. In this dilema a lady friend said: 'Why not try Humph-

went back to him-the grapes are not likely to get crushed in a hurried transit night. The proprietors who have not presses of their own sell their grapes to the manufactu ers. The price, which varies according to the quality and the quantity in the market, ranges between 10 and 20 cents the kilogramme (two and a quarter poun's). A hectare of grapes will yield four barrels of wine of 200 litres each (about fifty barrels). Two kilos are required to make a litre (a little over a quart). The cream of the grape is first extracted by the press. The first squeeze is very light. The others are more power ful, and produce each time a more and more inferior quality of juice, until the sixth is reached, by which time very little is left in the skins. The skins, which are not distilled with the juice, as is the case with making Bordeaux, are used to make a very bad brandy.

The process through which champagne passes from the juice to the bottle is some-what complicated. First the juice is put it has acquired the proper flavor and bouquet. Then comes the important point of effervescence-a source of great inxiety to the manufacturer, for the ex tremest care must be taken to reguate the amount of carbonic acid gas which has generated in the wine.

Too much will burst the bottles and too little will make the wine flat. The sac-charine matter in the wine is also regu-plied by the finest sugar candy. The wine is now drawn off into casks to undergo the fining, which removes the "ropiness." It is then ready for bottling. It sometimes remains in the bottles several years before it goes through the final tally, are gradually raised up until they stand vertically, head downward. They are shaken and turned round every day. This is to make the sediment descend, for all foreign matter goes with the juice, fo the simple reason that it cannot be got to go anywhere else. The wine cleans itself, however, and finally all the deposit collects in a lump on the cork from which it is "disgorged," literally blown out, cork and all. Then a certain quantity of liqueur is put in to fill up the bottle again and to give to the wine its distinctive character. This liqueur consists of a preparation of the very finest sugar candy. the best champagne and the oldest and

A most amusing scene to philosophic spirits recently occurred at a London court in a litigation concerning the ownership of a donkey. The presiding judge, bor-rowing a hint from Solomon and the caliphs of Bagdad, had the suimal brought into court to test the allegation of the de-fendant that it would eat bread or vegetables offered it with Lord Salisbury's com pliments," but would reject the same with symptoms of loathing and contempt when Mr. Gladstone was named as the donor. As it happened, the wily quadruped when challenged by the claimant not only devoured indiscriminately the Tory and Liberal carrots, showing no partisan spirit whatever, but, when the experiment was acknowledged a failure, set up such mixed notes of exultation and protest that the magistrate, deafened by the outrageous bray, summarily dismissed the claim.—Chicago Herald.
